From the Lay Director's Notebook

Last month I quoted from St. Paul's 2nd letter to Timothy in which he states, "I have fought the good fight, I have kept the faith, I have finished the race." Since then I have been noting several things that lead me to wonder if the race is over or if our people have stopped running. Among those things are; the lack of candidates for weekends, the lack of people who are willing to advance into leadership roles, such as a rollista or Rector/Rectora, and the difficulty in filling the palanca chart for the weekends.

Why is it that we have a constant struggle this season ('05/'06) to get enough candidates to fill a weekend? It leads me to wonder if Cursillo in this area has fulfilled its usefulness, is it time to discontinue the weekends, have we run out of people to tap for candidates? Or is it that the easy candidates have all, so to speak, been harvested? Perhaps it is the cost and that could be a reason but not an insurmountable one. Is it that we experienced Cursillistas are not stepping outside of our comfort zones to approach others to attend the weekend? Is it that we have moved away from the Cursillo call to "Make a friend, be a friend, bring a friend to Christ"?

Perhaps we are being affected by the fact that most of our communities are not growing and we really have gotten all of the available people into Cursillo already.

I think it is worthy to note that last year in January we had some 45 candidates this year it was only 20 and of course this then affects the number for February too. I really don't know the reasons for our decline in numbers but it has also been reflected in the number of people present for candlelight (although the candlelight this January and February was bigger than it has been for several months) and closings.

I ask you all to pray about these matters and let us hear from you. I can't bring myself to believe it is because we have stopped running. Contact a board member or your area representative or me. We need your input on the candidate situation.

I also ask you to pray for those who are eligible to move on to higher leadership roles as we are having trouble finding people who are open to accepting even the possibility of being called to take more responsibility. Perhaps it is time to return to eight weekends per year instead of ten.

Peace, Love and Joy through, with and in Christ.
Jim Nevins

Thank You From Cursillo #233

Dear Cursillo Family,

Thank you all for the prayers and palanca that was given over the last three months. It showed at the team meetings and especially on the Cursillo weekend. I believe it was an awesome weekend for both the candidates and team members. I think there was much healing over the three-day period and our hearts were filled with God's love.

It was an honor, blessing and privilege for me to have been given the opportunity to lead Cursillo #233. I can say that I really enjoyed it all, because of the help of the Cursillo family, the Holy Spirit and being able to leave it "In His Name."

Thanks again and may God bless you all.

Les Kelch - Rector #233

Candle Challenges

We have received multiple complaints about there not being enough candles available at candlelight. In the last year, we have purchased 100 new candles, but the bulbs in the candles are failing at an alarming rate. After every weekend there are approximately 100 candles that will not work and 90% of the time it is a bulb problem, not batteries. We have purchased more than 200 bulbs in the past 6 months and are about to purchase another 200. One contribution to the failure may be dropping. The bulbs fail once the candle has been dropped. As a point of reference, the cost of a bulb is more than half the cost of the candle

Discovering and Celebrating

Do you like to be surprised? I do - when it is a good surprise, of course. I believe God likes to surprise us, to give us little glimpses of Him in unexpected places. When that happens to me, it makes me pause where I am, to take in with pleasure whatever it is that I feel, see, hear, taste, smell or think that has the essence of God in it.

That happened to me not long ago on a visit to the Quincy Art Center to see an exhibit by Nancy Wiley entitled A Dollmaker's Art. Now don't go running away, you fellows, because I said "dolls"! They are more like sculptures with real clothes that run the gamut from circus performers to Swan Lake ballerinas. But the surprise happened in none of these. It happened when I saw the doll fashioned after a real person, Mary Ann Cord, a black woman who worked for Mark Twain.

The artist, Nancy Wiley, read of Mary Ann in a book by Twain. He told how Mary Ann would sit and listen to his stories in the evenings - "a cheerful hearty soul and it was no more trouble for her to laugh than it is for a bird to sing." He asked her once how she had lived so long without any troubles. She then told him her story.

Born into slavery, Mary Ann's life was turned upside down when her husband and seven children were all sold, her last child torn from her arms, and she was left alone. Years later during the Civil War a troop of black Union soldiers came to the plantation she was working at. One soldier came into the kitchen where she was and as they looked at each other she realized it was her youngest son, Henry, who had been ripped from her arms when he was just a boy. Can you picture the joyous reunion that must have been?

The artist was so touched by the story since her own son was called Henry and she couldn't imagine the pain Mary Ann must have felt. So Nancy created a doll of Mary Ann Cord with a dress made of pieces of material patched back together like her life was after the loss of her family. On the skirt Nancy painted pictures of Mary Ann's children reaching for her.

Reading the story and looking at the work of art brought tears to my eyes - in sadness at the pain people endure and they inflict on each other. It also made me pause in wonder at the strength of the human spirit to go on. The story did not mention the word God or faith but I felt His presence there with me at that moment - one of His surprises I did not expect to find that day in the Art Center.

In a devotional I read, Hope for Each Day, by Billy Graham, Billy writes "Some of the most godly people I've every known were men and women who were called upon to endure great suffering. They could have grown bitter and resentful...yet, because they knew Christ and walked in the joy of His presence every day, God blessed them and turned them into people who reflected Christ."

As it often happens, those moments of Grace open me up to His presence in my life, melt away a hurt or a worry, or give me peace and comfort that He is there in my times of sadness and pain. But there are also times when His "surprises" are just bits of awe that I encounter - in nature, in other people, in music, or in a forgotten memory, that make me laugh, sigh, or revel in it. Like they say, "The more I know, the more I know I don't know." I don't find this daunting but exciting in terms of God for that means I will have a lifetime of "surprises" in store with Him in my life.

Thanks for hanging in there, fellows. Next time I'll talk about cars, or football or woodworking - talk about more for me to learn! Much love, Terri May
